

Colorado River Basin Poll Results: Utah

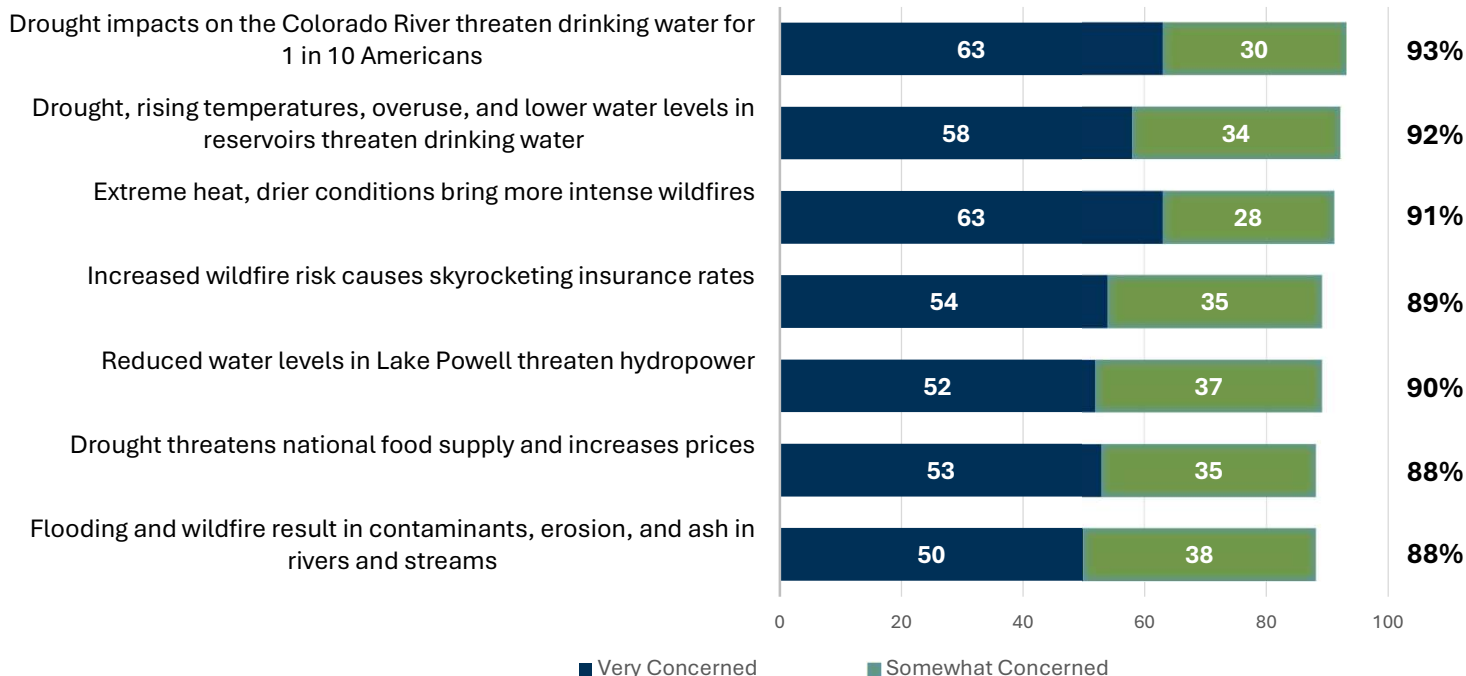

Key Takeaways:

- 86% of Utah adults believe addressing drought impacts and diminishing water supplies from the Colorado River is a priority.
- Nearly all Utah adults believe that it is important for federal officials (91%) and Colorado state officials (94%) to improve water security in the Colorado River Basin.
- Utah adults are concerned drier conditions and diminishing the Colorado River water will threaten drinking water, bring more intense wildfires, and cause skyrocketing insurance rates.
- Utah adults believe government officials should prioritize restoring wetlands, implementing water-saving strategies, increasing agricultural efficiency, and managing forests to protect water supplies. Concern about the drought and diminishing water supplies is a bipartisan issue with high concern across the political parties.

The Walton Family Foundation sponsored this multi-state project. This poll was conducted by Morning Consult between June 12-19, 2026, among a sample of 2,474 registered voters across 7 states, including 350 in Utah. 248 interviews were conducted in Utah’s Colorado River Basin counties and those who draw water from the basin. The interviews were conducted online, and the data were weighted to approximate a target sample of Adults based on age, gender, race/ethnicity, education, and party identification, within each state. Survey results are provided for educational and informational purposes only. They are not intended to, and do not, support or oppose any candidate for political office, political party, election outcome, ballot measure, or specific legislation.
